

The image shows a close-up, vertical view of a book's spine or cover. The left side is a light beige, textured material, possibly paper or cloth, which appears slightly worn and aged. The right side is a dark blue, textured material, possibly leather or faux leather, with a fine, pebbled grain. A vertical seam runs down the center, separating the two materials. There are a few small, light-colored specks or fibers visible on the dark blue surface.

New York, Jan. 29.

DR. PLAZA.

Piezas en los dos grandes edificios
Reconquista 212 y Chacabuco 105.
72 xp

Calle ALBERTO DI GIOVANNI
c 74 f8 m8 l p w

and losses promptly settled here
and complete powers having conferred on the agents.

rp 621

A close-up photograph of the binding of a book. The top portion shows the edges of several pages, which are a light cream or off-white color. Below the pages is a dark, textured material, likely the spine or a cover strip, which appears to be a dark brown or black leather or faux leather with a pebbled grain. The lighting is soft, highlighting the textures of the paper and the binding material.

